BACKYARD NURSERY—As senior Jane Shivers proves, younger brothers and sisters often need hours of time and extra attention from the older members of the family.

"NOW SUZANNE"—"But Daddy, I'm sure Christopher Columbus discovered America." Senior Sue Boehm receives useful advice from her knowledgeable father who regularly helps Sue complete her daily homework assignments.

A FAMILY AFFAIR—Senior Dianne Lesch enjoys an occasional evening at home watching television with her family. Since most S.H.S.'ers carry a heavy load at school and participate in many activities, these moments of quiet and relaxation are both cheerful and gratifying.

"WE-L-LLL"—Mr. Alden Gross expresses his honest opinion of modern music fads while listening to an impromptu guitar performance by his son Jim, an ardent rock and roll fan.

SPAGHETTI AGAIN—In preparation for the evening meal, Italian A.F.S.'er Andy Parolo helps Don and Kathy with the family chores in the King household where he resided for his year in Salem.

BRINGING IN THE LEAVES—Like many Salem teenagers, Dave Schwartz finds that autumn brings not only school and football games, but also an annual job: raking leaves.

Classes

STITCH IN TIME—Students in Bessie Lewis' Home Economics classes perfect the sewing skills which will be of practical value to them as homemakers.

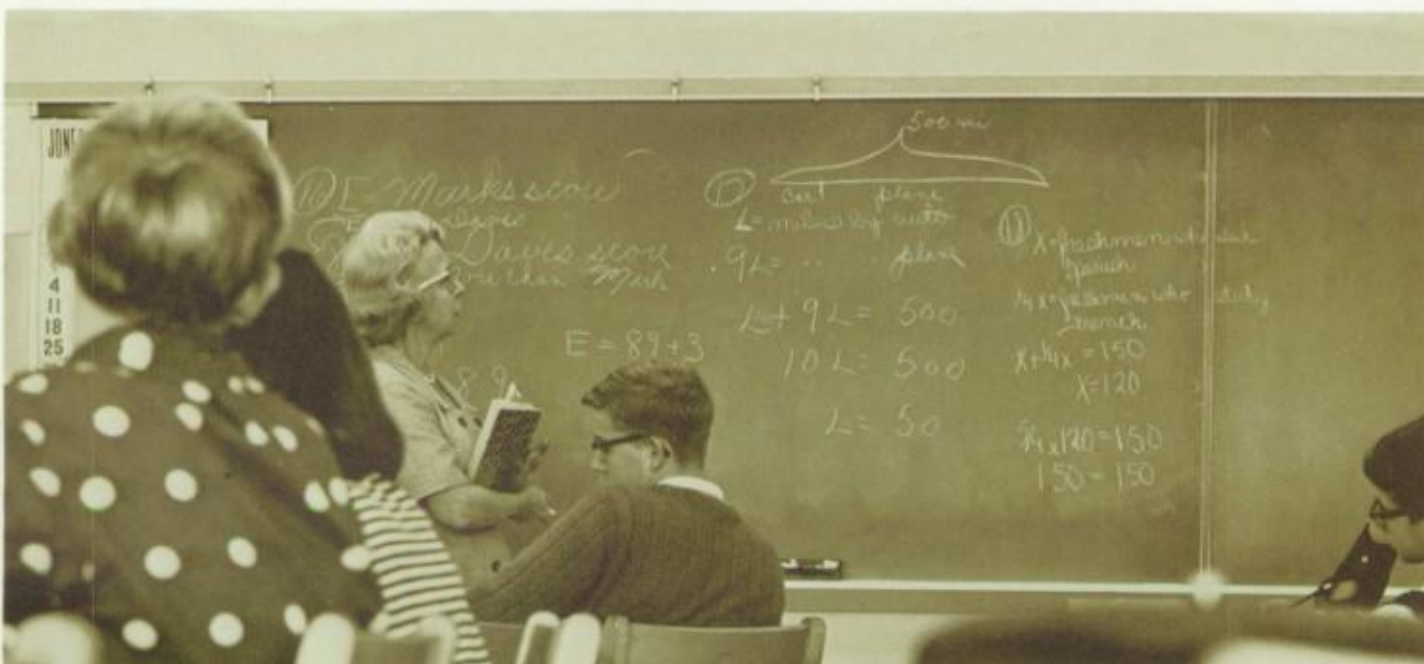

TOOL TALK—An Industrial Arts student watches and listens attentively while his teacher, Frank Stone, demonstrates the proper methods of machine operation. The shop classes learn skills which enable them to acquire jobs.

"TRY IT AGAIN"—Student pianist receives helpful advice from her choral director, F. Edwin Miller. Mr. Miller devotes many hours to music and he organizes fine concerts.

SHOWTIME—Biology instructor John Cabas employs a slide projector to supplement the textbook and illustrate laboratory techniques. Mr. Cabas also uses charts, microscopes, experiments, and dissection of specimens to help students understand the biological sciences.

THE UNKNOWN QUANTITY—A blackboard covered with the various mathematical terms can create quite a problem for some of the students in Jane Eckstein's algebra class. By careful explanation and work in class, Mrs. Eckstein helps her students to master this interesting but often difficult course.

KEY ADVICE—Helen Carlton, typing instructor, helps student Lilane Coy to learn the fundamentals of secretarial skills.

Services

OUR DAILY BREAD—Cafeteria workers Marie Geist and Ruth Jeffries are two of the women who prepare and serve nutritious meals five days a week to over half the student body.

UNDER THE WEATHER—Senior Colly Rhodes is sure to recover under the professional care of school nurse Mary Gonda, who is always on hand to give medical attention.

"TAKE THIS DOWN"—Reliable and well-organized, the school secretaries, such as Marilou Holroyd, handle many important school business affairs. Their numerous duties aid the student body in many ways.

A CLEAN SWEEP—A familiar sight around the halls of S.H.S. is Willard Crowl, known to most as "Ike". Besides being efficient, the custodians are friendly, courteous, and helpful. Needless to say, they play a vital role in maintaining a well-run school.

READ ALL ABOUT IT—Open daily, the school library provides the students with numerous reference books, novels, magazines, and newspapers. Irene Gbur, assistant librarian, helps S.H.S.'ers use library facilities.

BUS STOP—For those students who live some distance from the school, the bus service is much needed and appreciated. The Salem bus drivers take faithful care of their passengers.

Activities

"ANYTHING GOES"—This popular song was played regularly at football games by the Salem High School Marching Band. Spectators looked forward to an enjoyable half-time performance each week by Richard Howenstein and his students.

IN A BIND—As library club members, Amy Hobbs and Pat Yakubek repair damaged books. This is one of the many service projects carried out by the club to help maintain an efficient school library.

QUAKER CLEAN-UP—One of the Key Club's primary projects this year was reconstructing two Quaker Sams which they erected at football and basketball games.

"A LITTLE HIGHER"—Pep Club President Jeff Johnson receives assistance from Beverly Callahan in anchoring one of the many posters designed to boost school spirit.

DECK THE HALLS—As in past years the Student Council decorated the halls of Salem High School with Christmas trees. The student body took an active part in this project by contributing ornaments.

"LET ME EXPLAIN"—John Graham is quite capable of explaining the various intricacies of the research project which won him an award at the Salem Senior High Math Fair sponsored annually by his organization, the Slide Rule Club.

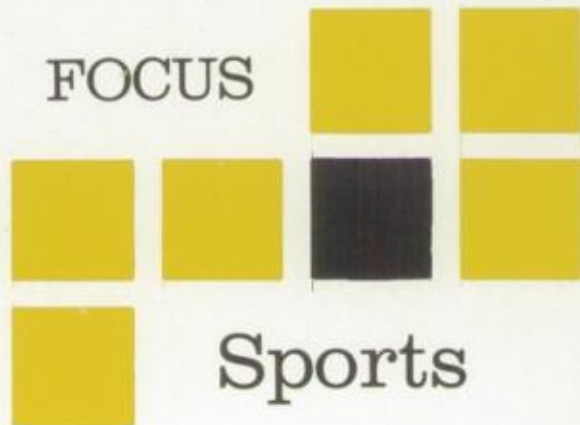

Co-operation
sharing in group
endeavors

PUSHOVER—One of the most popular indoor sports, volleyball is played in both boys' and girls' gym classes. Except for senior Health students, all S.H.S.'ers are enrolled in physical education and participate in a program of sports, including speedball, archery, baseball, and others. For those who are especially athletic-minded, there is an intramural program which includes volleyball, basketball, and golf.

FOCUS

Sports

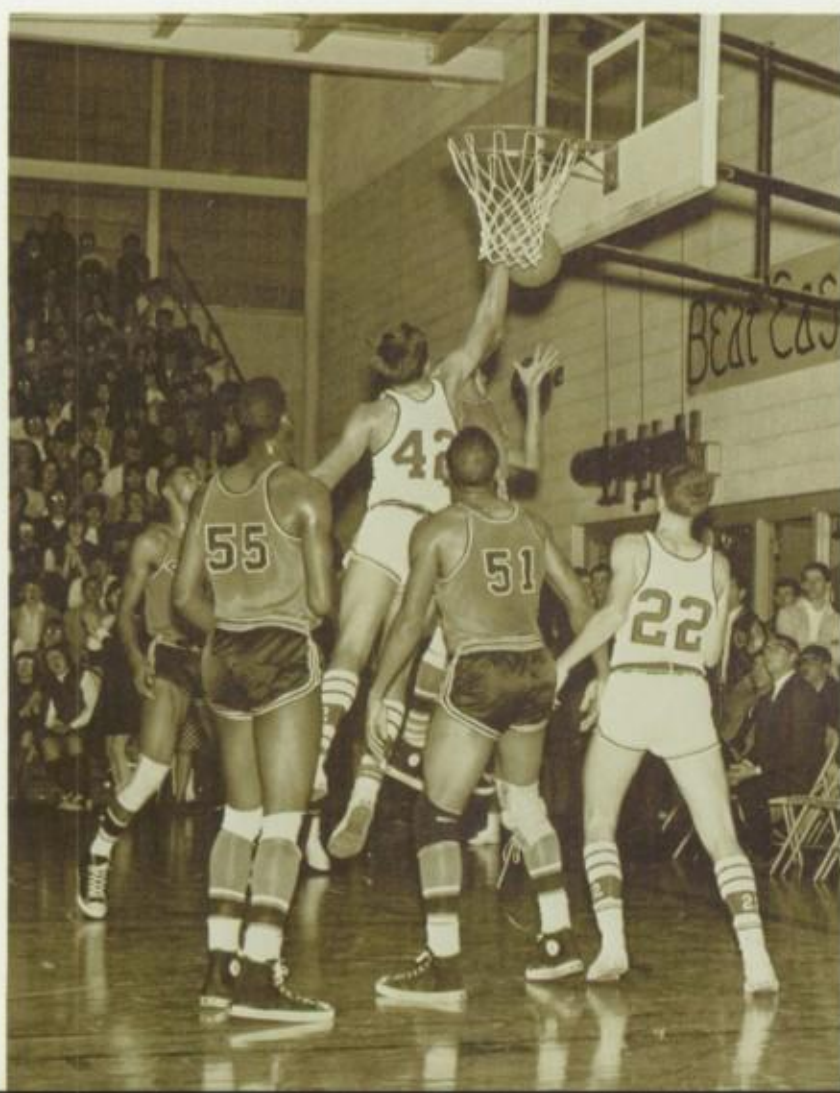

BREAKTHROUGH—Strong-willed and eager to win, the Quaker gridiron men charge onto the field through the traditional hoop made by Pep Club. Each week the club decorates the locker room with posters.

FLYING LEAP—With a final burst of energy, a Salem track star leaps into the air to complete his jumping event in the traditional Quaker spirit.

GET THAT REBOUND!—An alert Salem basketball player is quick to capture a rebound for his team as the mighty Quakers face one of their toughest opponents.

Athletic vigor
spawns discipline
of mind
and body

FIGHT, TEAM, FIGHT!—With energy and enthusiasm, the students of S.H.S. support their football team. Their sportsmanship is evidenced by the crowded stands and the loud-voiced cheers for a Quaker victory.

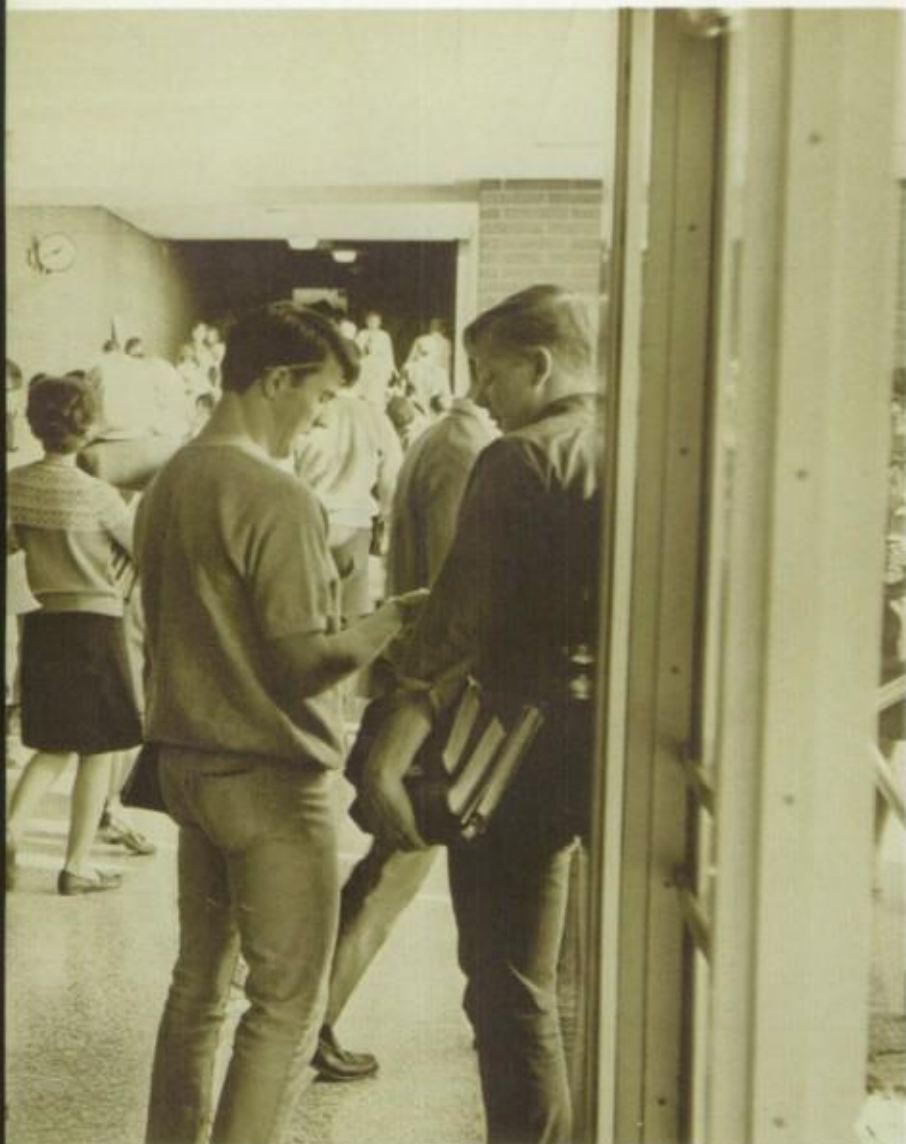

"YOU'RE KIDDING!"—Val Altomare, an S.H.S. underclassman, receives the latest bit of high school gossip from his close friend, senior Sue Boehm. In between classes students often find the time to engage in casual conversation.

FOCUS

Leisure

CORRIDOR CAPERS—Tim Tullis and Don Wolfgang seem to be plotting a practical joke. It's anyone's guess what will happen when these fun-loving friends conspire.

THE LUNCH BUNCH—Senior Ray McNutt seems to be enjoying the V.I.P. treatment from his classmate Bonnie Schneider. The informal atmosphere of the cafeteria often results in humorous episodes such as this one.

TIME OUT—While Trudy Nedelka, Dianne Lesch, and Gayle Seroke complete their class assignments, Jeff Johnson pauses for a moment of rest.

Library magazines and newspapers also provide a means of relief for tired minds. The library subscribes to more than 100 periodicals.

SUPERVISED STUDY — He knows he should study, but the temptation to take a breather overcomes Alex Fratila.

Community

SIDEWALK SHOPPERS—Giving support to Salem's merchants are S.H.S.'ers Evelyn Scott and Charlotte White.

BUCKET-BOUND—Washing windows is only one of the many tasks which are assigned to job-holder Roy Bush.

ROLL THE PRESSES—Mark Harroff, like many students of S.H.S., takes on adult responsibilities by working at a part-time job in the community.

THEME TIME—A familiar sight at the Salem Public Library is the appearance of English IV students, hard at work on their term papers.

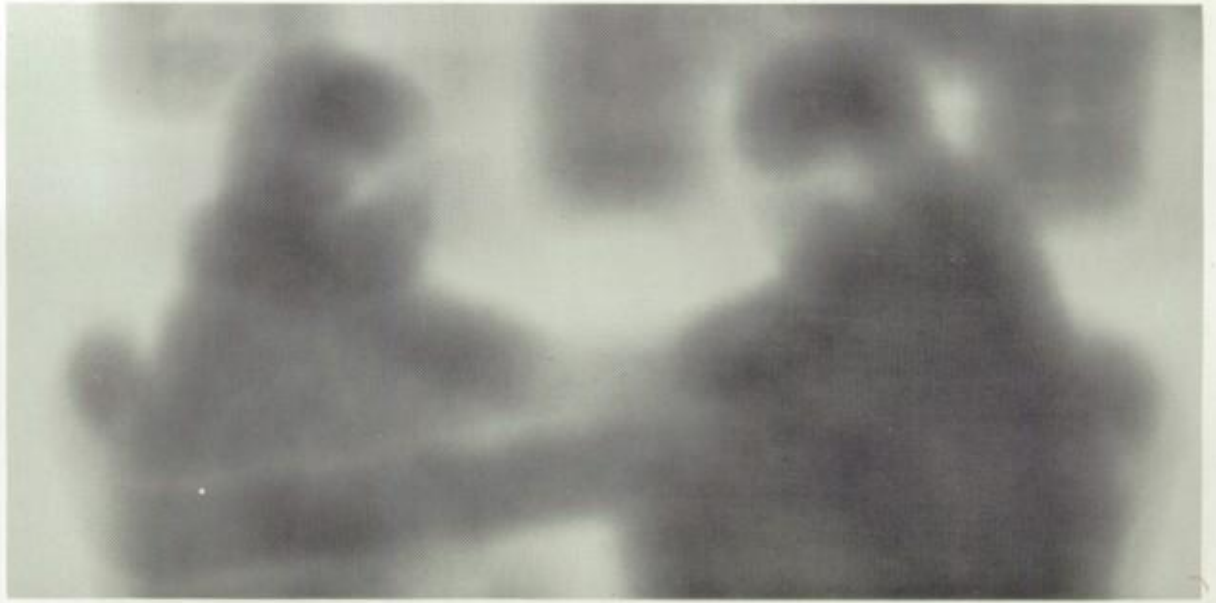

Responsibility

ten girls as outstanding senior personalities

As a responsible leader in several S.H.S. groups, John Paul Tolson has exhibited the stability, intelligence, and industry which assure his future success.

Student Council President Tom Vacar uses his public-speaking talents to present his dynamic ideas and opinions. Progress is one of Tom's primary goals.

Petite and lovely, Suze Wilson displays poise and charm as she eagerly accepts and efficiently handles her many duties.

Always ready for the unexpected, senior personality Gayle Seroka maintains a zest for life and new adventures that intrigues her friends.

Sally Starbuck expresses her convictions with wit and diplomacy. Even when they disagree, others must admire Sally's intelligence and common sense.

Attractive Becky Ingram combines a fun-loving nature with a sense of duty. By assisting her many friends, this bright senior expresses her desire to serve.

Tall, good-natured Joe Maxim has achieved great success as an athlete and as a leader. A cheerful grin and friendly greeting are Joe's trademarks.

The casual humor and gay manner of Connie Borrelli have made her one of the best-liked girls in the class of '67.

Rick Hackett

Jac Bloomberg

Dianne Lesch

Rugged discipline and a sense of fair play are exemplified by Rick Hackett. A great athlete, Rick has brought honor to his class through his achievements.

Active in and contributing greatly to the success of many S.H.S. organizations, Jac Bloomberg has displayed the integrity and responsibility that has made him a valued leader.

Displaying a warm smile and a quick wit, senior personality Dianne Lesch is filled with a love of life that affects everyone she meets.

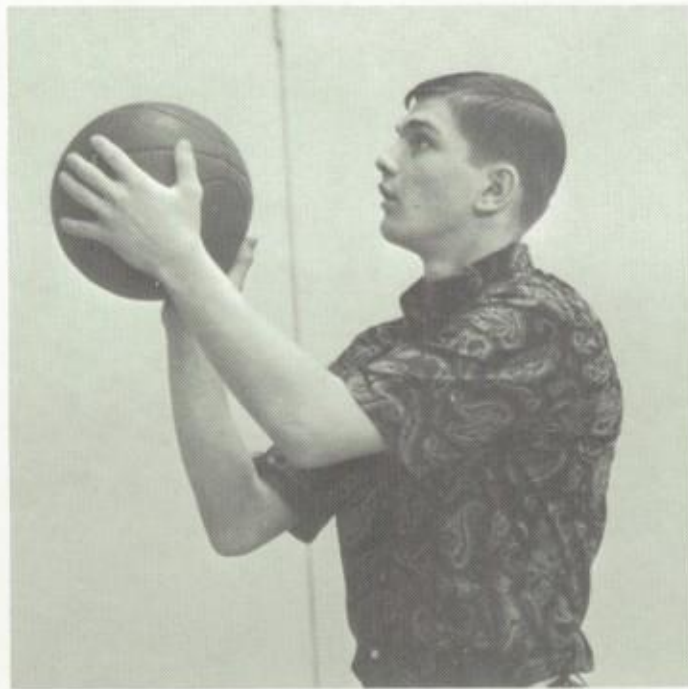

The perseverance and devotion to athletics of Chuck Montgomery have guaranteed him a permanent place as a part of the Salem sports tradition.

Because of her genuine concern for the feelings of others and a keen awareness of their needs, Janet Detwiler has become one of Salem's favorite seniors.

Always eager to help S.H.S. organizations is senior personality Amy Skowran. Her record of service plus a sparkling personality have contributed to Amy's high school success.

Peggy Huber possesses a many-faceted personality. Whether she is a queen or a cheerleader, Peggy is assured the respect and admiration of her classmates.

As an enthusiastic supporter of Salem athletics and a popular student leader, Jeff Johnson has become a symbol of the attitudes and actions of today's youth.

'As a senior, the future was suddenly here. . .'

As a senior I finally realized that I must begin to seriously consider my future plans. I hopefully dispatched college applications and anxiously awaited replies. I was more confident of my ability to get along smoothly at S.H.S., but I also appreciated the fact that I had the responsibility of setting good examples for underclassmen. Despite a pressing schedule of college-preparatory courses, I made time for recreation and hobbies. I took my seat at sports events, and cheered for my team during victory and defeat. With spring came thoughts of the prom, graduation, and the inevitable trial of term papers for English IV. After completing that ordeal successfully, I began to anticipate graduation. As I donned my cap and gown, I experienced a bit of nostalgia at the thought of leaving S.H.S. My classmates and I had shared common interests and youthful ambitions, as well as good and bad days. As I walked down the aisle to receive my diploma, I felt pride in my past accomplishments and resolved to overcome my failures so that I could justify the hours spent here at S.H.S.

A basic step in college admission procedure is the submitting of applications for grade transcripts.

'At year's end, I was ready to move forward . . .'

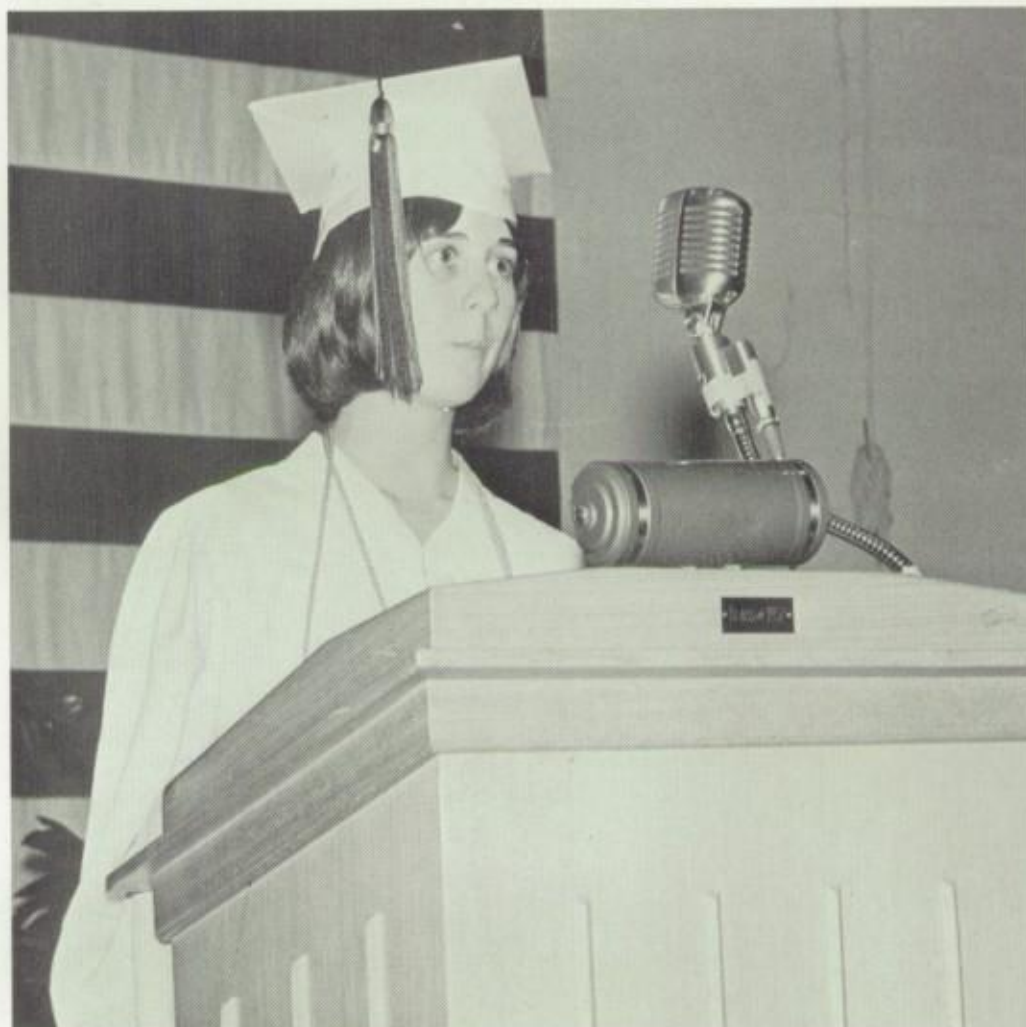

The donning of cap and gown symbolizes the arrival of the long-awaited senior graduation.

'Graduation marked my fearful but eager

Completion of high school marks the beginning of adult life.

Class speaker Sally Starbuck discussed "The Younger Generation."

entrance into the competitive adult world'

As Salem High School Principal Wayne Grinnen called out the names of the graduates, School Board President Gail Herron awarded the diplomas.

As I donned my cap and gown that night, I was filled with memories based on four years of trials, failures, and triumphs.

I remembered not just the classwork but the things I had learned about myself and my relation to the modern world. I remembered pep rallies, post-game dances, and study hall pranks. My mind saw a kaleidoscope of assemblies, club meetings, and classroom assignments.

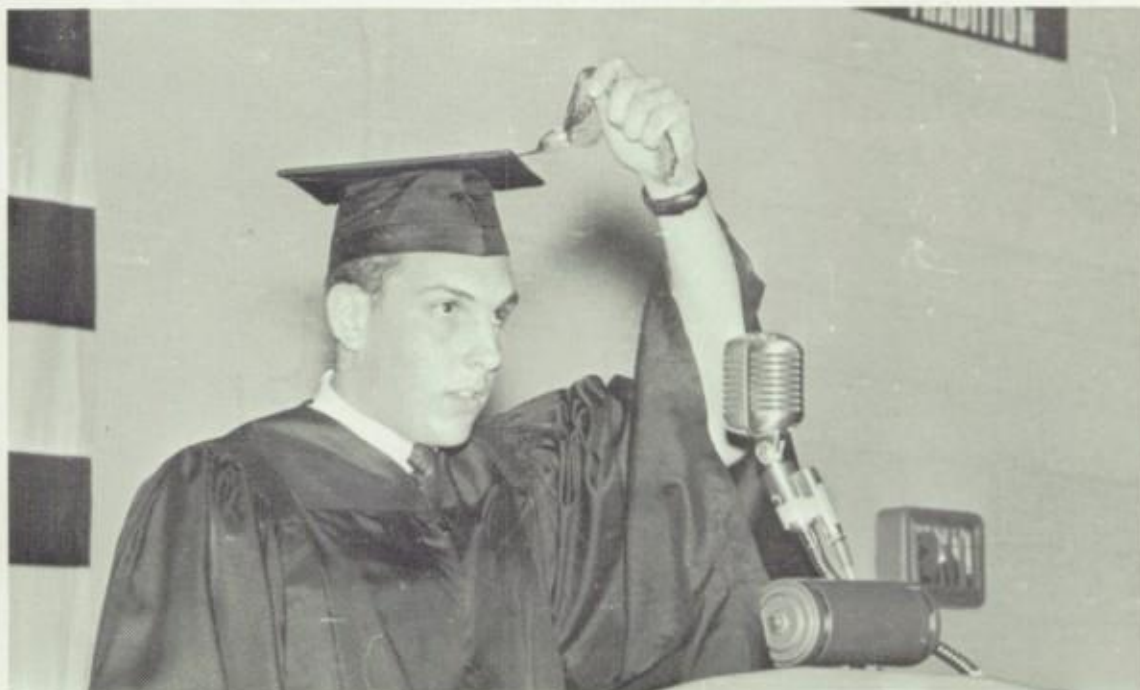

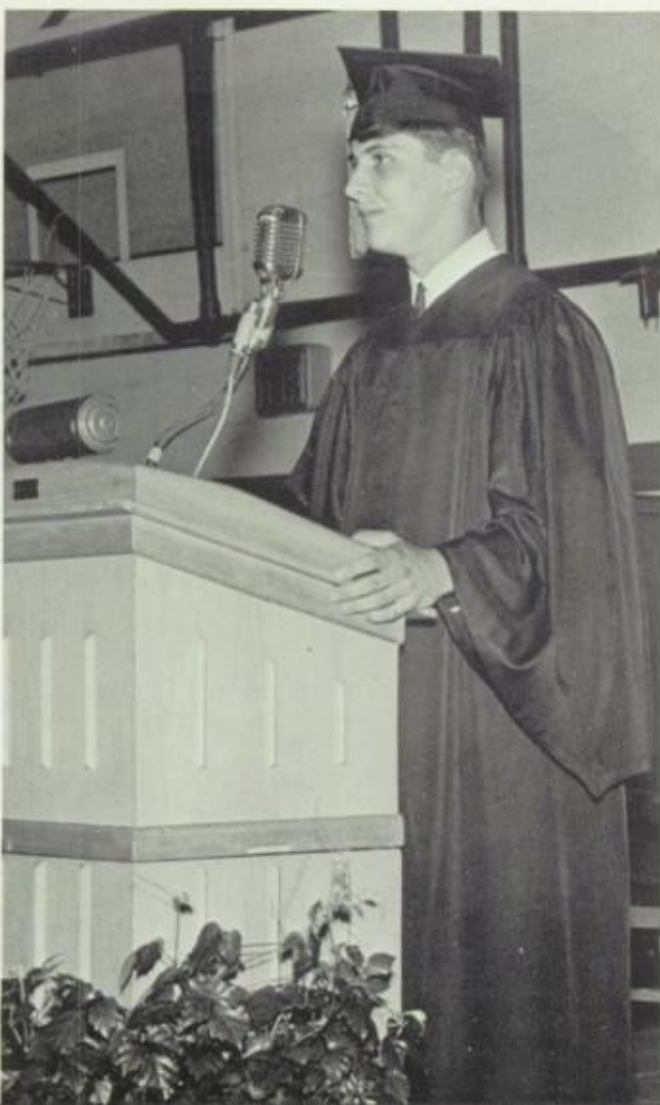

I had learned a great deal here. Now I was faced with a chance to put into practice all the theories of adult behavior and knowledge I had accumulated. I was confronted with a future that demanded of me much individual thought, planning and hard work but that offered success in return.

I felt somewhat uncertain but eager to experience all that life had to offer and contribute my best to society. I was determined to prove I could achieve my youthful goals and retain high ideals in the face of reality.

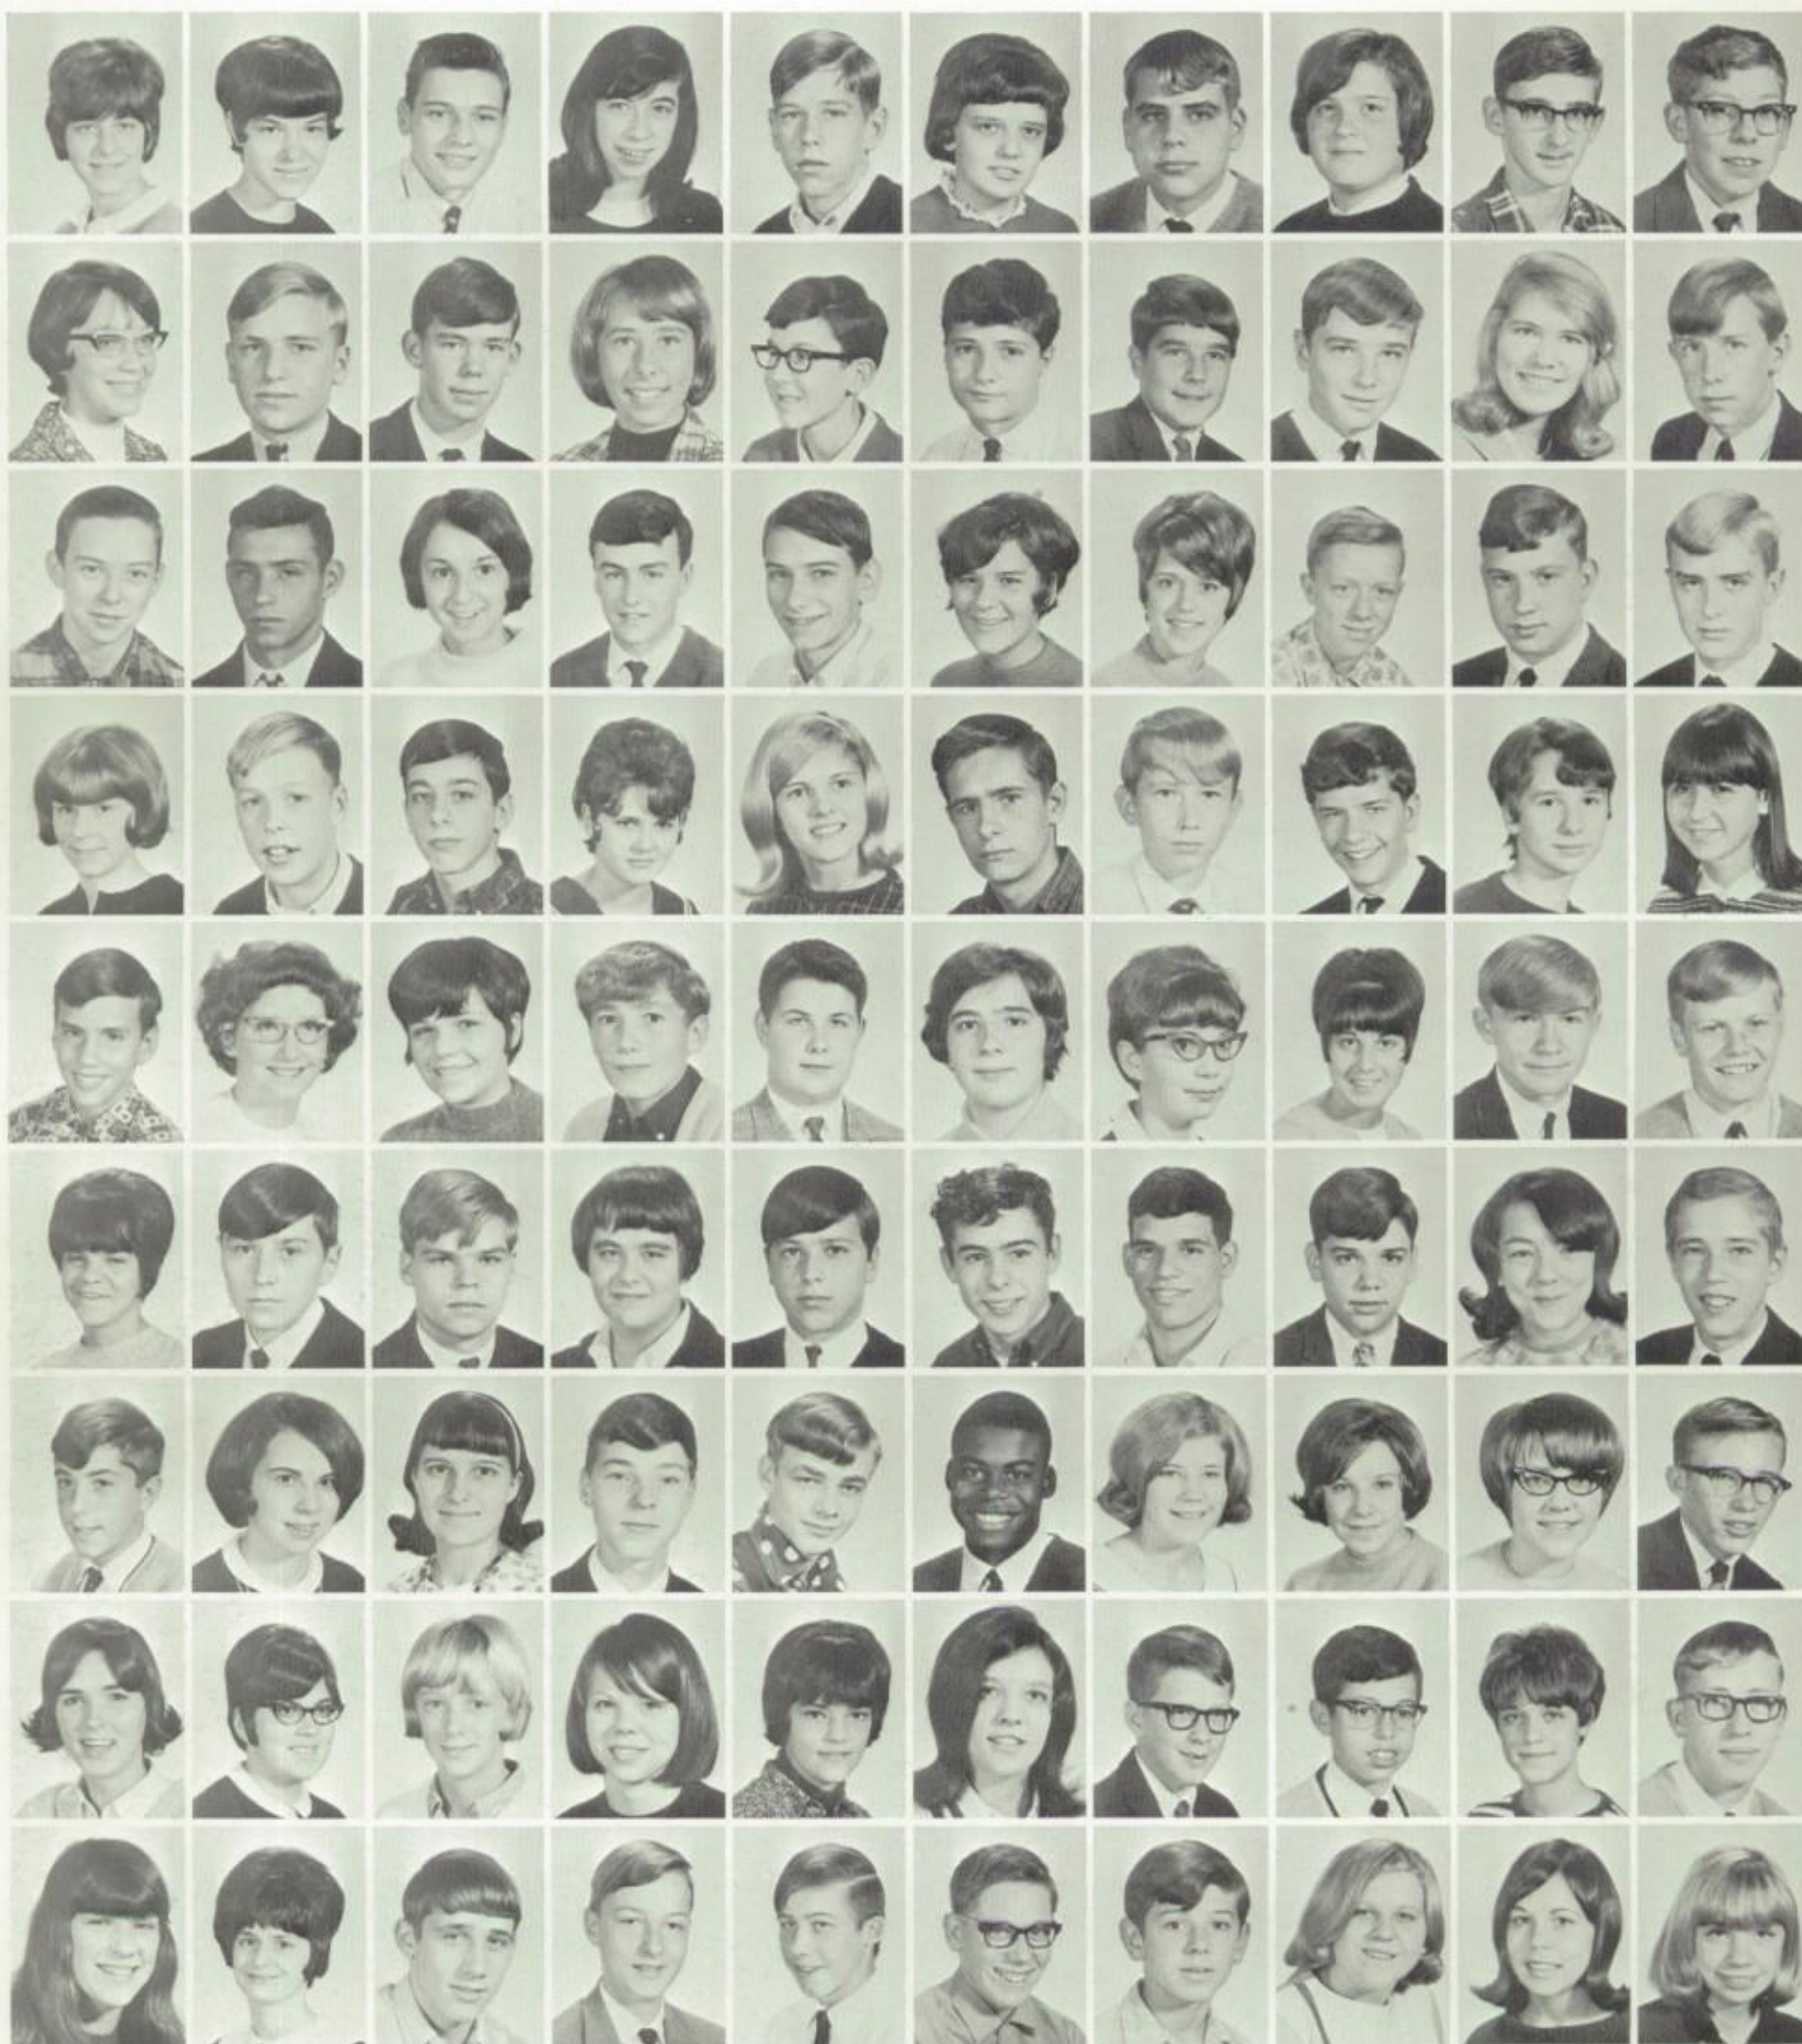

Feeling nostalgic, I sang the alma mater. Judging from their faces, my classmates were experiencing similar emotions. Together we walked down the aisle, assuming the dignity and responsibility of our new status. I left a part of my life behind on graduation night, but with youthful confidence I resolved to move forward toward a worthwhile tomorrow.

Presiding over the changing of the tassels, Senior Class President Jac Bloomberg stated that the ceremony symbolized the student's entry into the adult world.

Class speaker Tom Vacar's speech was "And Inherit the Wind."

Freshmen

'As a freshman, I felt bewildered, conspicuous . . .'

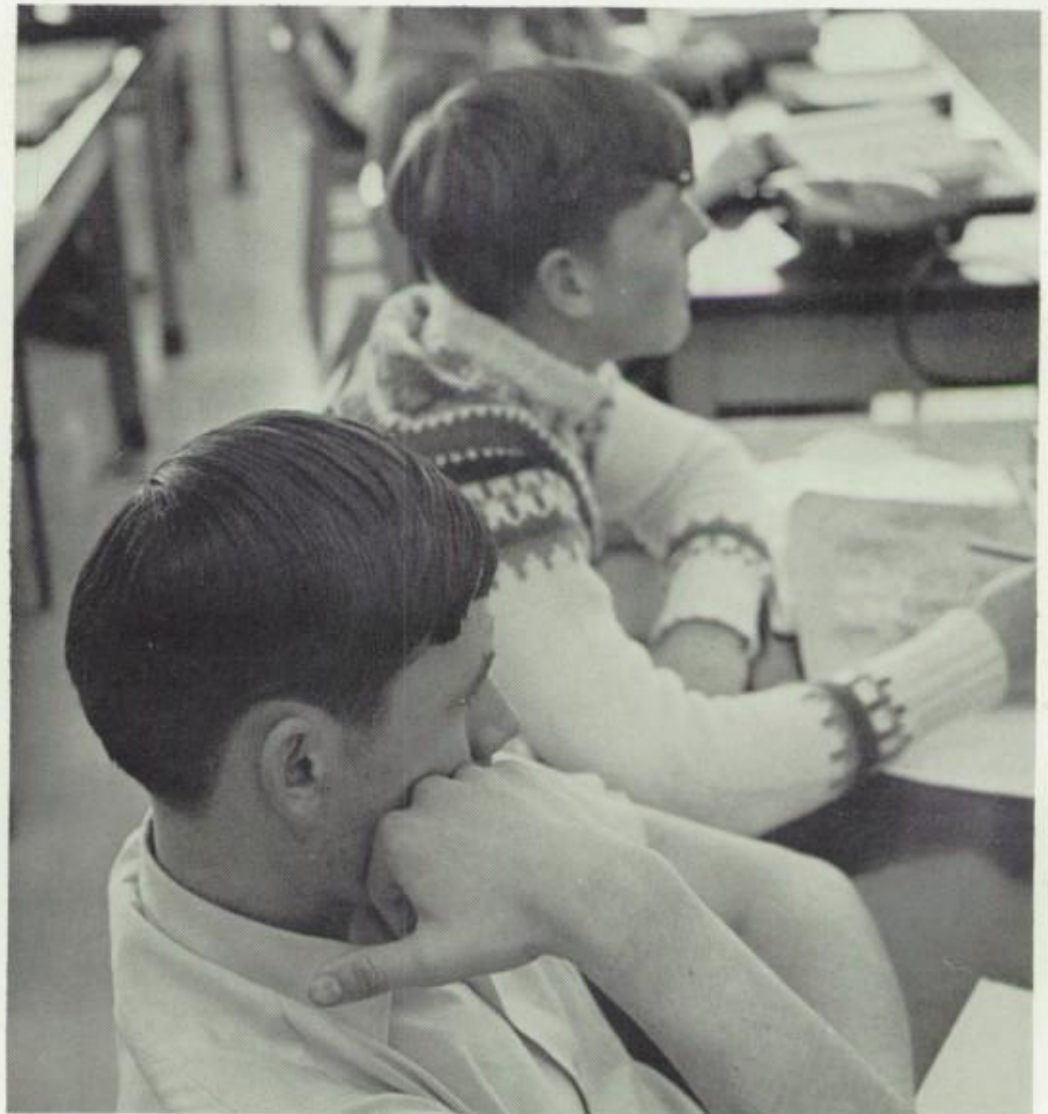

During my first days as an eager but uncertain freshman at Salem High, I looked at the confusing maze of rooms and wondered — would I ever learn my way around? My stomach felt queasy as I watched confident upperclassmen and seemingly austere teachers walk through the halls. At first I felt only bewildered and conspicuous, but gradually I became accustomed to life at S.H.S. — the perplexities of algebra, the mysteries of my first foreign language, the daily sprint to the crowded cafeteria. There was a pressure to get good grades, and I had to face the ordeal of semester exams for the first time. But there was time for fun, too. I felt a companionable, soaring spirit while cheering at sports events. My friends and I learned to cooperate and accept responsibility in such activities as choir, band, the Quaker Staff, Student Council, and speech club. By the year's end, I had become familiar with S.H.S. — its students, teachers, and policies. And I felt the warmth of being accepted and having my small efforts appreciated. However, I realized that the true test was yet to come and I hoped I could meet the challenge successfully.

'As a sophomore, I returned to old settings . . .'

As a sophomore I had much more confidence in myself and my ability to adjust. One year of hard work and fun at S.H.S. had taught me my way around and prepared me for a year of increased responsibility. No longer considered a "baby" in the school, I accepted my schedule of classes matter-of-factly. I knew many of the students and teachers, and felt "at home" in these familiar surroundings. Although very busy, my classmates and I managed a heavy load of classes. Biology experiments, second-year languages, geometry, and English II were challenging. With my increased prestige I entered into more school activities. Several boys in my class showed their skill in sports events and I was justifiably proud of them. For perhaps the first time, I realized that the school as a whole is more important than any separate part. A few of my closest friends were upperclassmen. Gaining in maturity and experience, I was able to look objectively at some of my past successes and failures and make plans for the future. I grew up a little as I learned more about myself and others.

'As a junior, I faced challenging goals . . .'

From the beginning I realized that my junior year would include many new challenges and experiences. My classmates and I discovered that such organizations as Hi-Tri, Robed Choir, FSA, Key Club, and Formaldeaides were relying on us. Faced with positions of leadership and responsibility, I tried to develop the necessary maturity, cooperation, and dependability. As in past years, there was no lack of homework. My schedule was a difficult one, and I struggled through intricate Algebra II problems as well as perplexing chemical equations. In addition, there was a mathematics project to complete and United States History. Between classwork and extracurricular activities, I gave serious thought to my future career and began investigating college catalogues. I also arranged to take the college board examinations in the spring. Social life consisted of the usual sports events, dances, parties, and the long-awaited White Christmas Dance and Junior-Senior Prom. While serving on the prom committee, I gained valuable experience in co-operating with others. My classmates and I felt proud as we watched others enjoy the dance we had worked so hard to make a success. As the year came to an end, I felt more sure of myself and my future, and eagerly anticipated my final year.

Through perseverance, juniors develop creative yet practical talents.

policies, forming curriculum, aiding students

Salem High's top administrators, Superintendent Victor C. Wood and Principal Wayne R. Grinnen, lauded for their "competent, progressive leadership" this year by a state education consultant, set school policies, co-ordinated the curriculum, and directed school operations.

Working in connection with the administrators, the Board of Education collected school funds, approved the curriculum, and helped to create school policy.

In addition to helping Mr. Grinnen manage school affairs, Mr. John Callahan, Assistant Principal, served as a boys' guidance counselor and Student Council adviser.

Other S.H.S. counselors were Mrs. Doris Cope, Mrs. Jean Pridon, and Mr. Sam Pridon. With Mr. Callahan, they provided vocational material and college handbooks, administered standardized national education tests, interpreted test results, and helped students fill out schedules.

Mr. Dean Philips, Supervisor of Child Accounting, made absence reports, directed school welfare work, and co-ordinated school bus operations. He also represented Salem at Juvenile Court.

Performing a variety of services were S.H.S. secretaries Mrs. Marilou Holroyd and Mrs. Audrey Miller. Besides making attendance reports, the pair typed correspondence, distributed mail, answered phone calls, and kept permanent records of each S.H.S. student.

Mrs. Janis Melitschka, school treasurer, managed all S.H.S. funds.

Working together, the school personnel contributed to the "commendable educational progress" made at S.H.S.

Miss Betty Ulicny

Mr. Jan Denman, Mrs. Donna Elias, Mrs. Marjorie Miller

With the constant struggle for college entrance and good-paying jobs, communication and expression are a must. The English department at S.H.S. is designed to give students necessary review in correct grammar and spelling along with an excellent literary background.

In English I, freshmen reviewed grammar and usage and applied this knowledge to their literary studies and first attempts at creative writing. During the year they covered short stories, nonfiction, poetry, and Charles Dickens' Great Expectations.

In addition to studies of types of literature, sophomores in the second year of English mastered special units on television, the newspaper, ballads, and folk songs by Bob Dylan, Joan Baez, and others. They worked to improve their writing techniques and to gain more skill in expressing their thoughts and ideas.

In English III, S.H.S. juniors concentrated on creative writing and in an extensive survey of American literature, students studied great American orations and orators such as Patrick Henry and John Kennedy. The required spelling credit was also included in this course.

In their study of mankind, English IV students read selections from their text Images of Man, studied a special unit on The Family of Man (a study of mankind through creative photography), and wrote many themes expressing their beliefs based on ideas already learned. Also helping to prepare the students for college were the regular vocabulary lists and frequent quizzes. Contemporary Literature and Practical English, each a semester in length, were given as basic review and studies in modern reading.

to clear thinking in solving everyday problems

Mathematics is an exact science dealing with the relationships between quantities, magnitudes, and operations. More than just exercises with numbers, math is also useful in daily situations. S.H.S.'ers learned to apply the science to some of these problems.

In Algebra I, students studied the basic concepts of sets, functions, graphs, equations, and variables. Emphasis was placed on the properties and symbols needed for advanced calculations. Algebra II pupils expanded on the fundamentals learned in Algebra I. Students gained knowledge in co-ordinate geometry, functions, scientific notation, trigonometry, and probability. Some Algebra II classes constructed mathematics projects for display at the annual Math Fair.

Geometry students worked with geometric shapes, such as circles, rectangles, squares, angles, and parallelograms. As in Algebra I, pupils learned the theorems and assumptions that must be mastered before work can be done with advanced mathematics. Covering solid geometry, trigonometry, and patterns, Modern Analysis provided seniors with a college-level mathematics course. Solid geometry explains the appearance of plane geometric shapes with another dimension. Trigonometry deals with specialized functions and their relationships. Modern Analysis students also built projects for Slide Rule Club's Math Fair.

Whole, rational, and prime numbers, measurements, ratios, and the decimal system were considered by Practical Math students.

Review Math classes surveyed the essentials of mathematics and concentrated on the practical application of them.

Modern science offers advanced knowledge

Mr. Herb Jones

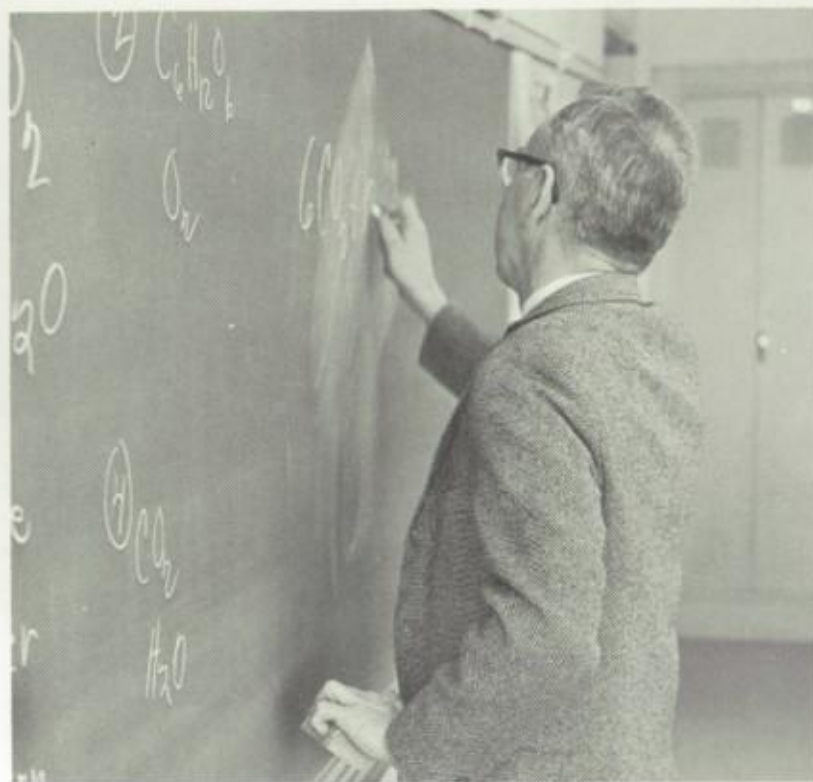

S.H.S.'s science department attempted to help students understand the basic scientific principles which play a vital role in today's world.

Biology students used high-precision microscopes to view cells, tissues, and life processes. Course instructors focused on plant and animal functions and the cell structure of living things.

In chemistry, pupils studied the composition of matter, the principles governing chemical combinations and reactions, and the relationship between elements. Aided by a new chemistry book, the classes obtained a college-level introduction to the subject. Laboratory experiments illustrated text material.

Physics classes worked to master the laws of motion and the relationship between matter and energy. Like chemistry students, they conducted quantitative experiments to better understand the principles in their book.

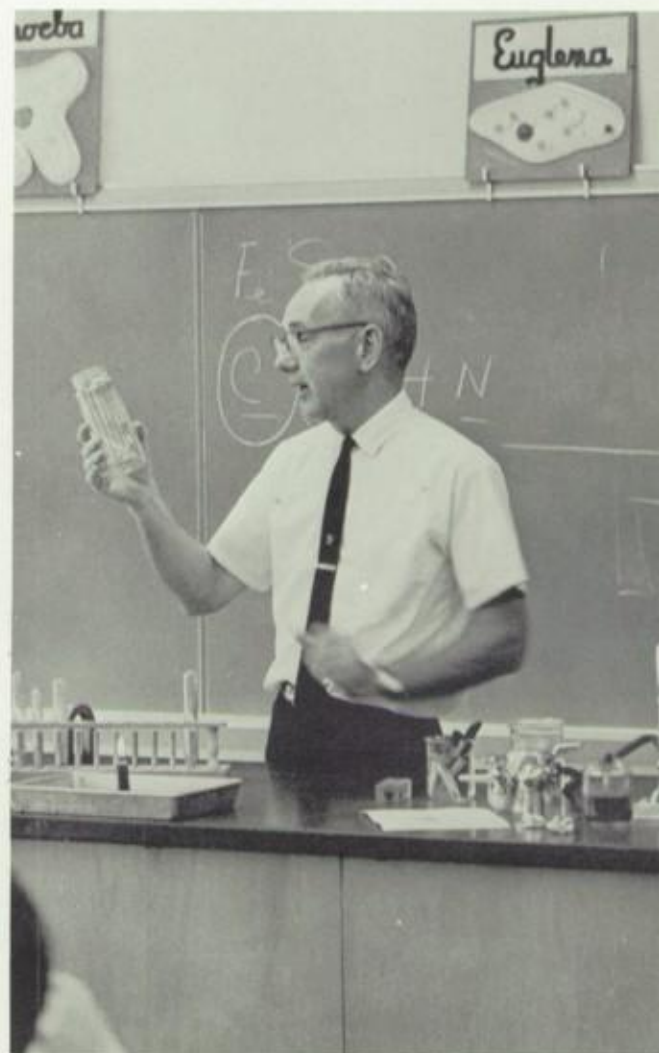

Concentrating on muscles, bones, and organs, Health classes helped seniors to understand the anatomy of the human body, while freshmen received a brief introduction to science in their General Science course.

Understanding is made easier by an instructor's board illustrations.

Personal attention to individual pupils promotes rapport between faculty and students.

To create a sense of citizenship and responsibility in students, S.H.S. social studies instructors surveyed United States history, government, and economy and placed them in global perspective.

In Problems of Democracy, seniors learned the functions of the national government and its many branches. Classes devoted the last semester of the course to current events and communism. In United States History, juniors studied the development of their country from its founding to the present. History instructors supplemented the course text with reports on contemporary affairs.

World history classes examined the cultures of the Eastern and Western worlds and man's progress throughout the centuries.

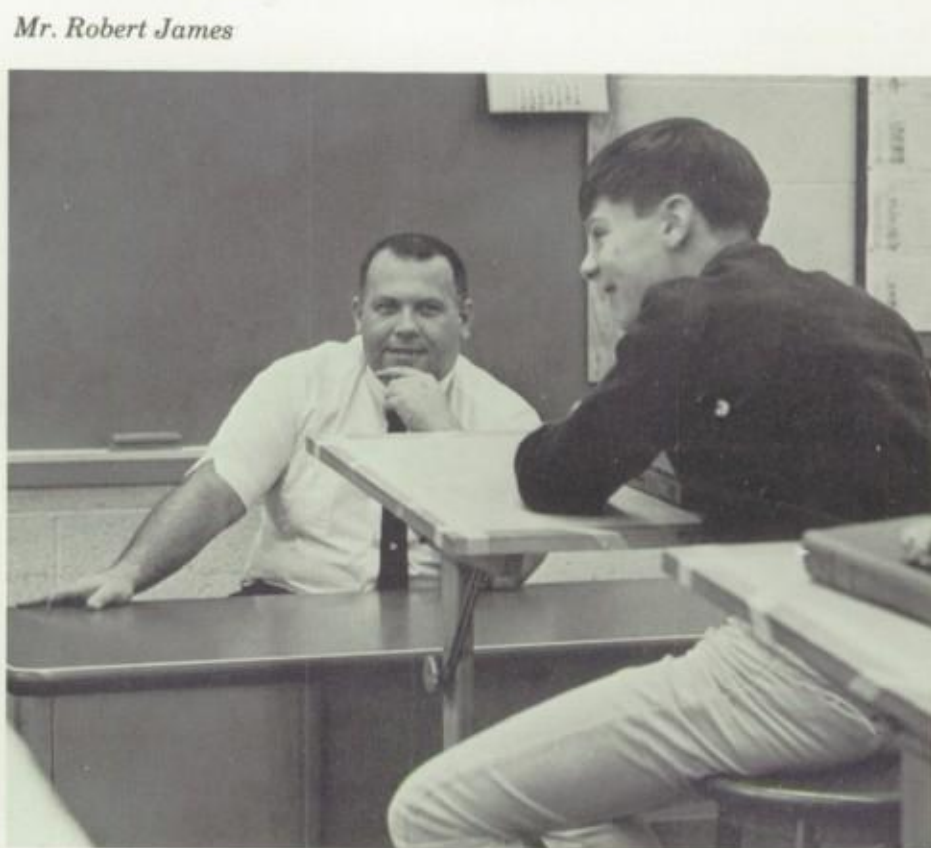

In geography, pupils related the climate and terrain of a country to its culture and growth. Teachers also felt that knowledge of a nation's physical features would help to explain its stand on international issues. Civics students gained a knowledge of the operation of the federal, state, and local governments in the United States.

In Consumer's Education and Commercial Law, students gained an insight into the business world. The classes spotlighted the stock market, business laws, and large corporation activities. Production and consumption habits in the United States were examined by Economics pupils. To gain a better understanding of themselves and others, Psychology students learned about various behavior patterns and personality traits.

by taking Spanish, French, German, and Latin

Command of a second language is a definite asset in a world of extensive travel and instant global communication. Recognizing this, Salem High offered students an enriching program of four foreign languages. Besides providing a basic background in vocabulary, grammar, and structure, teachers planned programs emphasizing the literature, culture, and heritage of the countries.

Fundamentals of grammar and pronunciation learned in the first two years of Spanish helped advanced students to hold class discussions entirely in Spanish.

In the first and second years of French, students increased vocabularies, studied basic grammar and sentence structure. In French III, students read short stories and covered French history. Students in the fourth year continued a study of literature.

In German I, students were taught basic grammar rules and idioms, while those in German II studied the German people and their way of life. Culture and history were highlighted in the third year and continued by German IV students.

Although no longer a spoken language, Latin is the source for more than half the English vocabulary. Latin I and II students found the course a valuable aid in better understanding their native tongue.

Students discover that grasp of another language makes for a truer understanding of their own.

designed to prepare students for business careers

Mrs. Judith Honeywell

Mrs. Marye Fisher

A wide commercial and vocational background is necessary to insure success in the business world. To attain this goal, S.H.S. initiated expanded curriculum offerings in many vocational areas.

Shorthand students learned to take dictation swiftly and efficiently. In office training, seniors studied the many aspects of a secretarial job and learned to operate office machines. Speed and accuracy were stressed in personal typing and Typing I and II. Students also learned to type correct business forms and letters. Bookkeeping I and II students kept books, balanced budgets, and wrote checks. Students surveyed the business world in general business, spotlighting history, business laws, insurance, and real estate.

Meeting five hours daily, the new vocational, clerical, and stenography courses were designed to teach skills in office operations. Next year the course instructors hope to expand their facilities.

In the special education classes, students needing assistance in their schoolwork were given special attention.

Music, art courses build cultural appreciation;

Providing students with a cultural background and equipping them with practical skills, Salem High's Music, Art, and Home Ec. departments hold an important position in the school's curriculum.

Students in the Art Department developed skill in water and oil painting, sketching, and clay modeling. Advanced art students were free to experiment with any art technique, including collages and montages. Young artists were urged to develop self-expression. In the spring, students displayed their work to the community at the annual Art Show.

Salem's music classes furnished young instrumentalists and vocalists with an opportunity to develop ability in their particular fields.

All instrumentalists in the music department were members of Salem High's football marching band. During concert season, the group was divided into fifth and sixth period bands, permitting band director Howard Pardee to give better attention to all of his students.

Vocalists were arranged in choirs according to their ages. Seniors and juniors were members of the Robed Choir. At the beginning of the school year, Robed Choir members received new red and black robes. The Mixed Chorus was open to freshmen, while the Girls' Glee Club included sophomores. The three choirs presented two school and community concerts, one in the spring and the other at Christmas.

In Home Economics classes, girls gained dexterity in domestic arts. Home Ec. I stressed conscientious food-planning. Girls in Home Ec. II, III, and IV studied interior decoration, clothing, foods, child care, furniture, and budgeting. At the end of the year, a Homemakers Award was presented to an outstanding Home Economics student.

physical ed encourages competition, fair play

In recent years physical fitness has been emphasized more and more. Salem High's physical fitness department has expanded to fill this demand.

Students not only participated in team sports but also developed individual skills. Archery, golf, and badminton helped the players to acquire accuracy and co-ordination. The weeks spent playing volleyball, speedball, and basketball taught students good sportsmanship and co-operation.

The physical education department also offered early-morning and after-school intramural programs for relaxation and an additional chance for improvement.

The courses offered by Salem's industrial arts department gave boys a chance to develop dexterity and acquire valuable skills and practical working experience. In the mechanical drawing classes and wood and metal shops, students learned procedures and techniques that would be valuable in their future careers.

In addition to the previously offered courses, a new program was added to the curriculum this year. The Occupational Work Experience program, gave 19 S.H.S. students an opportunity to acquire valuable job training while attending school. Provided with sponsors these students attended classes in the morning and worked at regular jobs for the rest of the day. This program provided students with a practical application for their newly-learned skills.

provide Salem High students with vital services

As illustrated at S.H.S., efficient non-teaching personnel are essential to any well-run school.

Serving tasty and nutritious meals, S.H.S.'s cafeteria staff provided daily lunches for senior and junior high students. Mrs. Rachel Pandolph, school dietitian, planned the meals according to state standards and handled food purchases.

Working throughout the day and in the evening, S.H.S.'s custodial staff maintained the school's attractive appearance. To provide students and teachers with pleasant working conditions, the staff worked diligently at keeping boards, desks, windows, and rooms clean. The custodians also made certain that the furnaces were workable.

Aiding students in their quest for knowledge, S.H.S.'s library displayed current periodicals, research materials, career information, and novels. Always ready to assist students in their research was librarian Mrs. Helen Heim. Attempting to raise the library's book collection to 10,000 volumes, Mrs. Heim ordered new books regularly.

Mrs. Mary Gonda, school nurse, was prepared to administer emergency medication to any public school student.

At one time in January, Salem High was a small-scale United Nations when five foreign exchange students attended S.H.S. simultaneously. Two boys and three girls, two under the American Field Service Program, and three under the Rotary Exchange Program, lived with Salem families during the year.

Graciela Fanjul, Salem's first Rotary student, arrived at the beginning of 1966 from Bariloche, Argentina, and stayed until January of '67, when she returned to Argentina to study medicine. Gracie attracted many friends with her sparkling eyes, cheerful manner, and cooperative attitude.

A.F.S. student from Sondrio, Italy, was Andrea Parolo, who arrived in August. Aided by his poise and sense of humor, Andy quickly adapted to the busy life of S.H.S. On his return to Italy, Andy began his language study at the University of Milan.

Another late summer arrival was Ernst von Franck, Rotary student from Bellig, Germany. His boyish grin and outgoing personality enabled him to make friends easily. Ernst's ambition was to serve as an agricultural expert for an underdeveloped country.

Zoila Calderon, A.F.S. student from Lima, Peru, joined the other students in December. Zoila, who planned to study languages at the university in Lima, enjoyed children especially, and was always eager to join in group activities.

Our fifth exchanger at S.H.S. was Rotary student Leonie Cameron, who began her year in January. S.H.S.'ers enjoyed Leonie's delightful accent and vivacious personality. An avid surfer in her hometown of Orbost, Australia, Leonie's plans for the future included teaching and serving in New Guinea.

Under the American Field Service Program, initiated in Salem seven years ago, a student arrives in August and stays with one family until June. Then students from each area travel by bus to Washington or New York for extensive sightseeing. In contrast, a student under the Rotary Program may arrive either in August or January, to stay a full year. The Rotary-sponsored student stays with three or four families during the year. Begun in 1966 with Gracie Fanjul, the Rotary Exchange Program of Salem sent two S.H.S. graduates to Argentina and Germany.

Ranked by their point averages, five boys and five girls placed in this year's top ten. The group was announced in early April by Principal Wayne R. Grinnen and received much local publicity.

Sponsored by the local American Legion post and its Auxiliary, four boys and two girls from the junior class were selected to attend Buckeye Boys' State in Athens and Girls' State in Columbus. The faculty nominated several candidates for each convention, and the Legion made the final selections.

At Salem High's second annual Math Fair, four first, second, third, and fourth place trophies were awarded in four categories. Projects were judged by a panel of teachers and businessmen for their originality, neatness, pertinence to math, and clearness of display.

The considerate student is always willing to sacrifice extra time and effort in assisting others.

Students receive honors at final assembly;

At the Senior Recognition Assembly, George Zeller received the National Merit Scholarship Award from Mr. John Callahan. George also placed third in the Brooks contest and won the Bausch and Lomb award for science and Martha McCready prize for math.

Student Council President Tom Vacar announces that the school driveway has been named in honor of S.H.S.'s outstanding athletic director.

At the annual recognition assembly, prizes were awarded to many talented students. The Brooks Award for writing excellence was given to seniors Gayle Beck (first), Ann Milligan (second), George Zeller (third), and Tom Bica, Vicki Galchick, and Sally Starbuck (honorable mention). Juniors Jim Stratton and Bob Salmen tied for first place. Larry Cody was third with Pat Deane, Tom Patton, and Barbara Schneider receiving honorable mention. Sophomore winners were Sylvia Breit (first), Peggy Stone (second), Ginny Edling and Lorie Roth (third), and Scott Clark and Dana Barnes (honorable mention). Freshmen Mary Purrington and Michele Ross tied for top honors, followed by Barbara Gatchell (third), and Pam Bruderly, Randy Hanzlick, and Martha Smith (honorable mention).

The Betty Crocker Homemaker of Tomorrow was Pat Jones, and Nancy Older won the Sales secretarial prize. The Varsity "S" award went to football star Joe Maxim. For their performances in the junior-senior play, John Whitcomb and Colleen Rhodes were honored.

An exotic atmosphere centered around the theme "Polynesian Paradise" highlighted the 1967 Junior-Senior Prom. Amid soft lights, fountains, and Tiki gods, prom-goers danced to the music of the Del Sinchak Orchestra. A colorful parrot, chattering squirrel monkey, and a canoe added to the islandic mood. Hosted by Don Webster of WEWS' Upbeat program, the after-prom entertainment included the GTO's, recording star Brian Hyland, and the talented Upbeat dancers. At 2:30 the entertainment ended and S.H.S.'ers headed for parties, breakfasts, and other early morning activities.

Miss Janis Yereb congratulates senior Thom Caldwell for winning the National Art Certificate and three Gold Keys. Artists Dwight Billman, Cassie Bailey, and Nancy DiAntonio also earned certificates.

Receiving the Marie Burns award from Mr. Howard Pardee is tenor Roy Bush. Other music award winners were Diana Gantz (soprano), Debra Green (soprano), Elaine Dangel (mezzo soprano), Ronnie Krauss (trombone), Nancy Cleckner (piano), Judy Mack (piano), and Greg Gorby (cornet).

Ringling the S.H.S. victory bell is an enjoyable student duty.

This year the Speech and Dramatic Club, advised by typing and speech instructor Mrs. Helen Carlton, engaged in many activities. The highlight of their year was the production of the Junior-Senior Play "Curtain Going Up." This was an excellent revival of the traditional junior-senior plays which have not been presented since 1956. The single performance of "Curtain Going Up," a three-act comedy, received an enthusiastic round of applause at its end. The Speech Club hopes that their efforts will set a precedent for the continuation of S.H.S. plays. In addition, two debate teams were formed and advanced to competition. Also, the annual performances of the Knickerty Knockerty Players were sponsored by the club.

This year's Art Club had a very successful year, culminating in the May field trip to the Cleveland Museum to observe art exhibits. In addition, the club participated in the May Show in Salem and helped the junior class construct prom decorations. In order to help adviser Miss Janis Yereb, art aides were appointed this year for the first time.

During daily class periods, the 64 members of Salem High's Robed Choir worked to improve their tone, diction, vowel sounds, and interpretation. They worked on all types of music, including folk ballads, religious songs, show tunes, and novelty numbers. Especially gifted students practiced solo numbers and formed ensembles. Under the direction of Mr. F. Edwin Miller, the chorus participated in many activities.

At Christmas, they prepared a concert for the student body. Their holiday concert, given for the members of the community, included both sacred and secular songs. Later, the choristers performed at Rotary and Kiwanis luncheons. One of the choir's most beautiful selections at its annual spring concert was a medley of songs from the hit musical, "Man of La Mancha," in which "Little Bird, Little Bird" and the popular "The Impossible Dream" were included.

The highlight of this year's activities for the members of the Robed Choir was a trip to Washington, D.C., in the spring. By selling magazines and candy and by soliciting funds, the choristers were able to finance the trip, which they hope to make an annual affair.

A banquet was given at the end of the year to honor choir members and to give recognition to individual talent.

earn top ratings in 1967 state competition

This year's hundred-piece band wore their snappy red and black uniforms for the first full season. Rehearsing long hours during summer and after school, the band blocked out ten half-time shows. Under the direction of Mr. Richard Howenstein, student director Larry Clapper and drum major Craig Everett, the majorettes, band, and color guard marched through mud, rain, and snow to present their shows. The band also participated in the Halloween, Christmas, and Memorial Day parades. The color guard preceded the band. The Pep Band played at pep assemblies and games, working with the Pep Club to raise school spirit.

The marching band was again divided into two concert bands. The concert and symphonic bands gave a benefit concert in March with the Junior High bands and the annual Spring Concert in May. At the beginning of the season, the symphonic band traveled to Carrolton, Ohio, where it joined several other area bands in the Annual Band Festival. Several members were participants in the All-County Band, composed of members of all the bands in Columbiana County.

The Salem Hi-Tri boasted a membership of over seventy this year. All junior and senior girls who had been able to maintain a 3.0 average were eligible to join. As in the past, the Hi-Tri donated food and gifts to needy families at Thanksgiving and Christmas. The club held their annual Mother-Daughter Banquet in May at which time gifts were presented to the advisers, Miss Claribel Bickel and Mrs. Beryl Tarr. Also, the club operated the concession stand at Reilly Stadium for the District Track Meet.

The Salem Interact Club, sponsored by the Salem Rotary Club, received its charter this year. The newly-formed organization sponsored many activities, including the men's physical fitness program. Club members enjoyed demonstrations of judo and scuba-diving and heard a lecture by Rotary exchange-student Ernst Von Franck. Besides ringing the Salvation Army bells at Christmas and reporting city election returns in May, Interact also contributed to the Victory Bell and the WKYC Sunshine Coach, a bus used to transport disabled and crippled children.

The 1966-67 year was an active one for the Salem High Key Club. One important project was a clothing collection for the Appalachia area. Another was the construction of two Quaker Sams. They also presented gifts to new teachers, cleaned the trophy case regularly, and sponsored two important activities: the good sportsmanship drive and the scholarship banquet held in May. To finance their many projects, the boys sold zip code books and candy and held car washes. The members of Key Club, chosen on the basis of leadership, integrity, and scholastic ability, are composed of sophomores, juniors, and seniors.

Holding the first summer meetings in recent years, the 1967 Student Council proved to be one of S.H.S.'s most active. The council's treasury was increased by profits from their book store and two car washes. Council installed a victory bell to be rung after all varsity victories and named it in honor of former superintendent, E. S. Kerr. Under the direction of President Tom Vacar, council sent letters to GIs stationed in Vietnam, an idea which drew praise from Ohio Congressman Wayne L. Hays. Council also made major constitutional revisions which provided for a new method of electing officers and members.

Under the guidance of Mrs. Virginia Doll, French teacher, the French Club embarked on its first year. The club's activities included ordering membership pins and enjoying a picnic during May. Although they were not able to do as much as they had hoped, the students are hopeful of a more active future.

In order to learn more about Spanish-speaking countries and the language itself, the S.H.S. Spanish Club listened to several lectures by persons with knowledge in this field. Exchange student Zoila Calderon was also invited to speak for the club. As in past years, a Spanish movie was shown.

Under the sponsorship of coaches John Cabas, Karl Zellers, and Robert James, the Varsity "S" Club was composed of all boys who participated in varsity sports. The club disbanded in 1959, but it was reorganized two years ago.

This year the Salem High Library Club set up a school book store, purchased new books, and repaired old ones. Library aides enjoyed a Christmas tea and a spring picnic held at the Country Club at which time pins were awarded.

The highlight of this year's Formalde-aides' activities was a spring trip to the Phipps Conservatory, Carnegie Museum, and Mellon Institute in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania.

For the second year the Slide Rule Club sponsored the "Mathematics Fair" which featured more than 120 student entries. Also, the club members increased their mathematical knowledge and ability.

Math aides helped teachers by grading tests, checking homework, and filling out grade sheets. They were of great assistance to S.H.S.'s math department.

The Future Scientists of America enjoyed many speakers and field trips this year, as well as their annual March Science Fair. The highlight of their year was a trip to Expo '67.

The biology aides, interested and experienced in their field of science, helped students to understand and enjoy the study of plants and animals.

Providing assistance for Spanish, German, and French teachers, the language aides helped check homework assignments and grade tests. They attended assigned classes, and participated regularly in classroom activities. Students with one or more years of a language were eligible for the program.

One service crew of S.H.S., the public address crew, was of great assistance during assemblies and informal school gatherings. Their jobs included the maintenance and operation of microphones and other public speaking utilities.

The most important job of the home ec aides was keeping the supply cupboards well-stocked. These duties were shared by girls who showed a great deal of interest in homemaking.

This year, S.H.S.'s audio visual crew aided teachers and students by transporting and operating the audio-visual equipment. They were in charge of taking projectors, tape recorders, and record players to those who requested such aids.

Office monitors were kept busy this year with the many duties that accompany their job. They relayed telephone messages, ran errands for office personnel, accompanied students to their lockers during classes, and distributed mail in teachers' mailboxes. They also typed attendance sheets and issued tardy slips. In the spring, they prepared the diplomas for seniors. All monitors maintained a "C" average in their school work throughout the year.

Under the direction of Mrs. Gilbert Everhart and Mrs. Fred Cope, the Y-Teen Interclub Council planned activities for the four groups of Y-Teens. Under their supervision, the Y-Teens collected money for several charity drives, sold programs at sporting events, decorated the YWCA building at Christmas, and sent cookies to soldiers in Vietnam. They enjoyed a talk by exchange student Gracie Fanjul and a May Dance, with the crowning of a Miss Y-Teen.

The deans' aides were of great assistance to Mr. Cope, Mrs. Cope, Mr. Phillips, and Mr. Pridon. They ran errands and helped with office work which relieved the deans of many time-consuming jobs.

Distributing Quaker Bi-Weekly issues on Friday afternoons were the circulation staff members. To deliver the correct number of papers to each room, the staff had to check the number of association members with class totals.

Because S.H.S.'s traditional annual was changed to a yearbook this year, the publication's last deadline was not set until June. Yearbook editors and staffers often worked on school nights and Saturdays typing copy, drawing layouts, identifying pictures, and writing headlines.

Publishing fourteen issues, the bi-weekly staff wrote interviews and editorials, covered news events, and complemented stories with many pictures. Collecting their story material and photos throughout the week, the staff worked on weekends and Monday evenings to meet their Tuesday printing deadlines. On Wednesdays, galleys were returned, checked, and pasted on page dummies. On Thursdays, the page proofs were checked and the paper was printed and distributed on Fridays.

The yearbook and bi-weekly business staffs kept financial records, sold ads to pay for production costs, and handled all of the publications' bills. The two staffs also sponsored two dances during the year to supplement the funds raised through advertisements.

Yearbook copy editors Vicki Galchick, Ann Milligan, and Sally Starbuck wrote and edited material for classes, organizations, and activities.

Yearbook editors-in-chief Gayle Beck and Charlotte Vaughan were responsible for designing the 1967 book, developing its theme, and co-ordinating the work of their staff.

John Shivers, yearbook sports editor, covered golf, wrestling, and baseball, as well as the traditional football, basketball, and track events.

Jim Stratton, first page editor of the bi-weekly, gave a thorough coverage of the news at S.H.S. in his articles.

Writing editorials and feature stories for the Quaker Bi-Weekly, Tim Schuller served as the publication's second page feature editor.

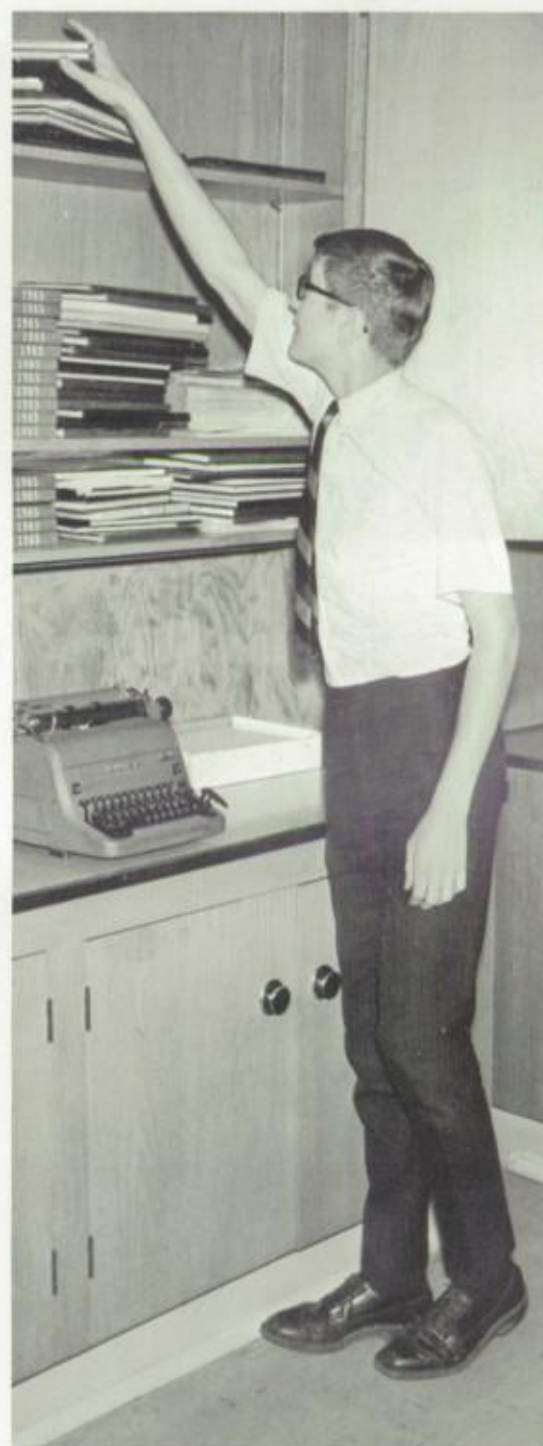

The third page, under assistant news editors Ginny Edling and Lorie Roth, contained news features, interviews, and honor roll reports.

Photographer Mike Miles provided all of the pictures for the bi-weekly, and some of his shots were used in the yearbook.

Classes editor Richard Everett organized pictures, arranged senior portrait schedules, and checked proofs before they were returned to the printers.

As yearbook index editor, Cathy Shoop organized senior and underclass indexes and checked copy for errors in punctuation and identification.

Besides writing a regular column, bi-weekly sports editors Tom Bica and Lou Markovich reported on freshmen, reserve, and varsity sports.

Peggy Huber—Football Queen

The crowd was hushed as 1965-66 Queen Sarah Krichbaum opened the white envelope. Behind her sat eight senior girls, smiling proudly in their long formal gowns. The choice was difficult, for each candidate was a charming, beautiful representative of the class of '67. A name was read and cheerleader Peggy Huber, smiling radiantly, mounted the platform to receive her white crown of chrysanthemums and gold football pendant. Amid enthusiastic applause, Peggy thanked her classmates and wished the team a successful season. Blonde, blue-eyed Peggy will be remembered for her versatility, sportsmanship, and friendliness to others.

Happy and excited, eight lovely girls waited breathlessly for the announcement which would make one a queen. Nominated by the basketball team and voted on by their classmates, the girls represented each S.H.S. class. A name was read and Janet Detwiler became 1966-'67 Basketball Sweetheart as admiring fans cheered. Gowned in pale pink, Janet smiled brightly as she received her crown, necklace, and traditional kiss from this year's basketball captain Rick Hackett. Later, Janet and her court were honored at a dance. A varsity cheerleader, Janet gave energetic support to the team during her reign.

The ever-present spectators at football and basketball games were the cheerleaders of S.H.S. The three squads cheered the players in victory and defeat. With the assistance of the Pep Club and the Pepettes, the cheerleaders sparked the teams with their pep assemblies and bonfires. Also, this year, the girls held several car washes to increase their treasury.

Salem High's group of enthusiastic Pepettes helped school spirit at sports events. Attired in monogrammed sweaters, the girls went to all games and cheered the team on to victory. Advised by Miss Betty McKenna, gym teacher, the girls planned their cheering routines and selected co-captains to maintain order.

The Pep Club of S.H.S. grew in size and spirit this year. Members made posters, planned pep assemblies, and encouraged the teams with their enthusiastic support. They also sponsored the annual Basketball Sweetheart Dance and sold Salem Quaker pennants and beanies to boost school pep.

Thoughts of the future fill the busy student with anticipation about new challenges, experiences.

With eight minutes and 46 seconds remaining, the Quaker defensive squad gets ready for action against Canton Aquinas. Further play didn't change the score.

Although the record books show only a 3-7 record, Salem fans can testify to the fierce pride shown by the mighty Quakers throughout the season. The players displayed hustle and determination in their quest for victory.

The Quakers opened the campaign by whipping Cleveland Lincoln 28-6. Salem's offense came through with a tremendous performance as not one Salem back was thrown for a loss.

The Red and Black suffered its first defeat of the season at the hands of the Ravenna Ravens 14-0. Although Salem could not get its offense rolling, the alert defense impressed Coach James as it recovered two fumbles and intercepted a pass.

Rains hampered the Quakers as they dropped their second straight game to Canton Aquinas 13-12. Salem drew first blood as they scored on a pass from Maxim to Liber. Later in the game Maxim found McNutt open in the end zone for Salem's final score.

In a game played in a constant down-pour, Salem was handed its third straight defeat to a fired-up West Branch squad 12-0.

Varsity team battles hardened opponents, shows

The following week Salem met Warren Western Reserve and came out the loser 12-7. Salem held a slim 7-6 lead until the fourth quarter. In the final minute of the game a Salem touchdown drive was halted only yards short of a touchdown as a Cody pass fell wide of its mark.

Quakertown was next invaded by the Canton Timken Trojans who handed the Red and Black their fifth loss in six starts 18-10. Salem scored on a 22-yard run by Metts and on a safety by McNutt.

Wellsville, rated the favorite in the next game, was soundly trounced by a determined Quaker aggregation 38-18.

In the final away game the Jamesmen were outclassed by the Boardman Spartans 38-12. The Quakers got both their touchdowns on passes from Cody to Shasteen and Metts.

Salem's next opponent, highly-ranked East Liverpool, was greeted by the most enthusiastic crowd that has turned out for a Salem game in recent years. Although the final score found the Quakers on the bottom 12-0, their performance was possibly the best in several seasons.

Rick Metts gained close to 150 yards and set a new Salem record by scoring four touchdowns his final game. The Quakers outscored Cincinnati Amelia 35-21.

Although the reserve and freshman football squads lost their first games of the season, they both went on to finish with winning records for the season.

After their opening loss to Louisville, the J.V.'s came back to take the next contest over Ravenna. After winning over Palestine and Minerva, the reserves beat Poland 3-0 and Sebring 22-8. The Quakers had their win streak snapped by an undefeated Columbian squad in a 7-0 contest. They then lost to Warren, beat Wellsville 21-14, and ended the season with a win over East Liverpool to tally a 7-3 record.

This year's freshman team set a new Salem record for frosh football. Their 6 victories against only 3 defeats was the best record ever compiled in Quaker history. After losing the first two games to East Palestine 18-12 and Boardman 12-6, the strong Quaker spirit and ability to come back after defeat helped the freshmen to defeat Sebring 22-6. After the Sebring victory, the frosh won five of their next six games, losing only to East Liverpool East.

Breaking a long-standing record is a rare athletic feat.

In its first year as a varsity sport, the Salem High wrestling team tallied a 2-7 record. After losing the opener to Alliance 43-10, the Red and Black fought hard but were again defeated by Marlinton and Minerva 39-8 and 44-2. With new strength the Quakers beat Warren Western Reserve 29-16. The next three games were losses to Boardman 26-16, Howland 28-11, and Minerva with a score of 43-0. The Salem matmen next trounced Canfield 33-6 but ended the season with a loss to Warren Harding 31-8.

The reserves showed a thrilling season with eight wins and one loss. Salem met each of their first six opponents and won with scores of Alliance 21-18, Marlinton 39-8, Minerva 33-18, Warren Western Reserve 22-21, Boardman 22-18 and Howland 22-13. This series of wins was broken, however, when they lost to Minerva 25-18. Next they defeated Canfield 25-13 and Warren Harding 32-8.

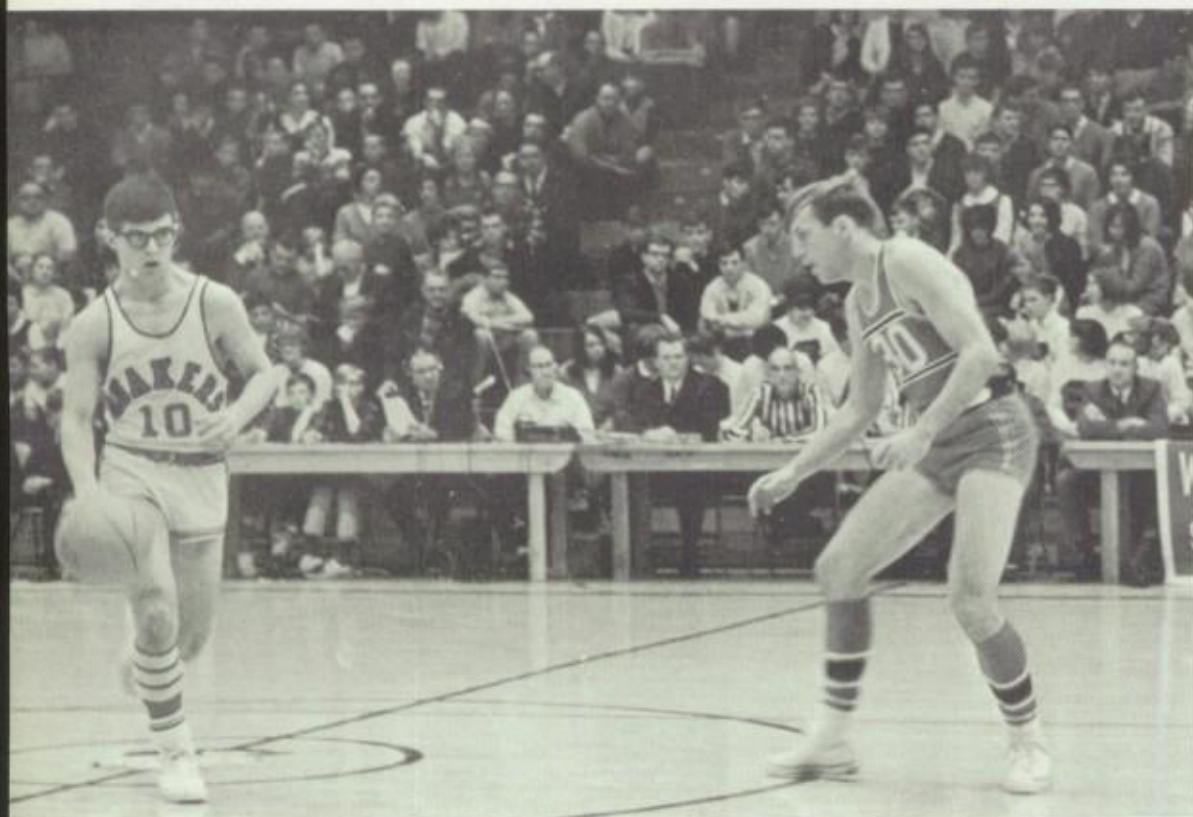

The Quakers attended two tournaments in January. The New Eastern League of Wrestling pitted Salem against Minerva, Canfield, Warren Harding, and Warren Western Reserve. Salem placed sixth with 22 points. In the sectional tournament, Salem placed twelfth.

pitting Red and Black against tough cagers

Hustle and pride—that's the story of this year's Red and Black varsity basketball team. The Cabasmen managed to compile a 12-7 record against such highly regarded aggregations as Cleveland John Hay, Steubenville, Youngstown East, and Cleveland Benedictine—a major feat in itself. But even more outstanding was the school spirit and pride that radiated from the fans, students, and even the players themselves.

Salem fans saw the Quakers gain victory over Warren Western Reserve, Youngstown Rayen, Canton Timken, Columbus Walnut Ridge, Cleveland John Hay, Niles McKinley, Ravenna, Wellsville, Cleveland Benedictine, Steubenville, Youngstown East, and Youngstown South. Salem's regular season losses included Columbus East, ranked number one in the state, Newark, Boardman, Alliance, Warren Harding, and East Liverpool.

The Quakers also showed their strength in the statistics department. Captain Rick Hackett hit for 309 points during the season, an average of 16 points a game. Rick also pulled down 112 rebounds and stole the ball 60 times. Close behind was Chuck Montgomery, with 304 points, 76 rebounds, and 63 steals. Rick Liber, 6'5" junior, led the Red and Black in rebounds with 245, and also scored 207 points. Dana Barnes, a starting sophomore, made his debut this year with 85 points and 66 rebounds in 12 games. Scot Cody, the last regular and also a sophomore, hit for 66 points and also grabbed 52 rebounds during his first year of varsity basketball. Paul Fennema, used quite frequently throughout the campaign as a starter and substitute, helped the Quakers out by scoring 124 points and pulling down 84 rebounds.

From the field, the Cabasmen hit 466 out of 1,133 shots for an average of 41.1 per cent. Misses at the foul stripe, accounting for several Quaker losses, lowered their average to a rather poor 59 per cent.

Bad luck dogged the Quakers all through the season, and culminated in Youngstown at South Fieldhouse. There the Quakers met one of the toughest teams ever produced in Youngstown, Cardinal Mooney. Because of an allergy caused by new lights, Rick Liber was hampered in his scoring. The Red and Black lost 46-40 in the final minutes of the game.

the area, led by high scorers Kenny Kenst with 224 points and George Spack with 148 points.

This season saw spectacular winning streaks over highly-touted teams like Youngstown Rayen, Alliance, Steubenville, and Cleveland John Hay. The Zellersmen opened the campaign with five straight victories until they met their match in a road game at Newark. Reservists quickly grabbed two more victories before they were stopped cold by a rangy Warren Harding team. Niles, Ravenna, and Wellsville fell victim to the little Quakers before they were defeated by East Liverpool in a squeaker. The Jayvees ended a fine campaign by beating Cleveland Benedictine, Steubenville, Youngstown East and Youngstown South in four home games.

Although freshman coach Chet Tetlow's unbeaten string of games was broken, the frosh aggregation bounced back to card a truly excellent 16-1 record this year.

The frosh started fast with easy victories over Warren Western Reserve, East Liverpool East, East Liverpool West, Poland, and Columbiana. Next came Boardman, Warren Harding, and Springfield, all victories. Then in an away contest at West Branch, the Quakers were defeated. This loss ended a 27-game win streak of Coach Tetlow's over the past two years.

The Quakers came back after the defeat to win the remaining seven games, including a return match with the West Branch Warriors. This year's frosh were led by high scorer Tom Fisher and leading rebounder Larry Hrvatin.

The exhausted athlete pauses to rest momentarily during a vigorous practice session.

Paced by seniors Dave Fleischer and Jay Oana and junior George Zeller, the Salem cindermen compiled a respectable 4-3 record in 1966, outscoring their opponents by nearly 200 points.

In the initial contest, a 95-32 victory over Southeast, the Red and Black captured every event but the pole vault. Top scorers were Fleischer, Oana, Zeller, and Rick Kilbreath, who won two events each. In the next meet, Wellsville jumped off to an early lead but was soon overtaken by Salem as Fleischer, Zeller, and Oana won two events each.

In the season's first triangular meet, Salem outclassed Marlinton and Newton Falls. Jim Windram, Mike Hary, and Terry Sheets swept all three places in the broad jump, enabling Salem to tally 71 points to Marlinton's 54 and Newton Falls' 36.

Although Fleischer and Oana were double winners, the Alliance Aviators defeated the Quakers in a 66-61 contest. In a very disappointing showing, the Quakers placed in a two-way tie for last place at the Youngstown Rayen relays. Greg Pash scored the lone Salem point by placing fifth in the pole vault.

The Red and Black suffered their worst setback of the season, an 84-43 defeat, at the hands of the Boardman Spartans. However, George Zeller tied the record for the 180-yard low hurdles at 21.2 seconds.

Salem then journeyed to the Ravenna relays and gained fifth place with 15 points. Greg Pash and Mike Hary vaulted for a combined height of 22 feet for Salem's only first place. The mile relay was the deciding factor as the Louisville squad turned back a determined Quaker team 64-63. Fleischer won both dashes and Hary vaulted 12 feet, the best in the district at that time.

In the Columbiana County Track Meet at Reilly Stadium, East Palestine edged the Quakers 56½-54. High scorer for Salem was Fleischer with 13½ points. The Quakers were also sparked by Windram's broad jump of 19 feet, 10½ inches and Mike Hary's 12-foot pole vault.

In their last regular season win, the Quakers exploded for 79 points to Ravenna's 48. Dave Fleischer won both sprints and George Zeller won both hurdles races as the Red and Black piled up nine first places. Fleischer again paced the Quakers with 5¼ points as they managed to place eighth in the N.E.O. District meet with 8 3/14 points.

take top honors at Columbiana County meet

Led by senior George Zeller, Salem's 1967 track squad compiled an impressive 7-1 record in dual and triangular meets.

The Quakers opened the season with an easy 78½-49½ victory over Wellsville. Next, the powerful Quakers rolled over Southeast in a 98-28 victory. In a triangular meet, Marlinton sent Salem down to defeat 93-67, but both teams held Newton Falls scoreless.

Charging back from defeat, the Red and Black whipped Ursuline 63-62, Alliance 79-58, Louisville 78-59, and Ravenna 82-55.

The highlight of the season came when the Salem aggregation scored 82 points to capture first place in the Columbiana County Track Meet for the first time in five years. George Zeller captured two firsts, winning the high and low hurdles. Andy Hicks, running the two-mile, put on a burst of speed in the last 30 yards to win his race by a step. Terry Sheets, voted the most valuable player of the meet, scored three firsts by taking the 100-, 200-, and 880-yard dashes. Salem's 880-relay team, not even expected to place, captured top honors easily.

Zeller capped his fine season by setting new records in both the high and low hurdles. At the district and regional meets, he broke the old high hurdle mark of 15.3 with a time of 14.8 and the low hurdle mark of 21.3 with a time of 20.7.

The Quakers started the season by being defeated by a strong Marlinton team. In their next outing, a triangular meet, the Salem harriers defeated Niles but were set back by MacDonald. Salem's top runners then traveled to the Braceville Invitational meet where they took third place among the 15 teams competing. In their first and only home meet of the season, the Quakers knocked off Springfield Local and Poland and became the first Quaker team to ring the newly-installed Victory Bell. In the annual Warren Invitational run at Perkins Park, Salem copped second place as they were again edged out by MacDonald. Although only gaining second place, the Quakers pulled an upset by beating the favored Warren Harding Black Panthers. Salem finished the season by making the trip to Boardman to compete in the district cross-country meet. The Quakers improved over their previous year's standing as they finished eighth in a field of 15 teams.

In their first year on the varsity level, Salem's baseball and golf teams recorded fairly successful seasons.

Under the fine coaching of Mr. Chet Tetlow, this year's varsity baseball squad turned in an impressive 5-4 slate. After winning a 3-1 victory over Marlinton, the Quakers were set back by the Beaver Local Cardinals 3-0. Eager for revenge, Salem came back to down the Cardinals 3-1 in their next game. After being defeated by West Branch and discouraged by five games postponed by rain, the Quakers came on strong to shut out the Minerva Lions 4-0. At a double-header at Centennial Park, the Marlinton Dukes captured the first game 5-3 but were defeated in the second game 3-0. The Quakers ended their schedule by losing a close game to Alliance 2-0. In the district tournament the Quakers lost to the Boardman Spartans.

Under Coach Bob Miller, the golf team carded a 4-8 record. After sending West Branch Warriors down to defeat, the Quakers kept hope for an undefeated season alive by knocking off the Minerva team. In the following match the team was handed its first defeat at the hands of a determined West Branch squad. After losing to Canfield, Leetonia, Columbiana, and Boardman, the Quakers downed Louisville. Their success was short-lived, however, as they lost the next three matches to Alliance, Leetonia, and Columbiana. The Quakers ended their season as they defeated Minerva for the second time.

E. W. Bliss Company

rolling mill division engineering center

In 1857 Eliphalet Bliss began a small plant in Brooklyn, New York. It specialized in the design and manufacture of punch presses and dies. By rapidly expanding and improving his business, Bliss made his presses and mills famous as a symbol of American progress in mass production. When the automobile industry began in the 1920's, the E. W. Bliss Company increased its personnel to the extent where today it employs nearly 6,000. With the acquisition of the Mackintosh-Hemphill Company, the E. W. Bliss Company began the manufacture of rolls and steel castings. Over forty years ago, the Rolling Mills Division set up its facilities in Salem in the old Buckeye Engine Works. Bliss began to devote itself to the design and manufacture of rolling mill machinery. As demand for sheet and strip increased, Bliss engineers were able to equip not only steel mills but also the smaller brass and aluminum industries. Today Bliss rolling mills are in leading metal plants throughout the world.

The Focus Team

The 1967 Quaker Yearbook wishes to thank the students and teacher who posed for the pictures used to exemplify the book's focus theme. The staff especially appreciates the fact that the group willingly interrupted their daily schedules to have photos taken—often with little notice.

Gaele Beck

Tonight, this year, we have put out a yearbook. With each consignment we have sighed and worked toward the last deadline; now it is past. The staff we had was meager, the work slow, but every page was a merging of our personalities and the product of many arguments and injured egos. Now it is past.

"Do you have a synonym for . . .?"

"Where's the crop stick?"

"What's the copy count for page . . .?"

"Is there something I can do?"

Now it is past.

Those who have helped, we'll remember each time we pick up the book. Frank Robinson, our photographer, came on a day's notice, for that's all we had as well, and took our pictures. Mr. Denman and his typing until three in the morning saved the yearbook for every deadline we had to meet. The copy editors and the few occasional helpers we acquired, between synonyms and cokes, wrote for us.

Tonight, this year, we have put out a yearbook. Now it is past.
